Dear Dan:

The first shipments of the 14-channel ground duping and analysis equipment racks have already been made, and additional shipments will follow shortly. We believe it desirable to have certain minimum fly-away kit spares available at the sites where these racks are located. Accordingly, we have prepared preliminary fly-away kit lists for Racks G, H, J, and K designated Equipment Lists YG, YH, YJ, and YK, copies of which are enclosed. We have already commenced procurement of some of these items so that they will be available for shipment fairly promptly. Copies of the lists have been separately furnished to Bob W.

It is probable that there will be a number of additions and changes to these lists as additional operating experience is developed and we become more familiar with the maintenance problems and component reliability of the racks. Proposals covering further support requirements for the 14-channel equipment will be prepared and submitted in the near future.

Bob W.'s people have recently completed Section 7, a listing of all capacitors, resistors, fuses, dry batteries, connectors, tubes, transistors, and semi-conductor devices common to the project systems. Because of the low consumption, and resulting stock of these items, we have been requested not to include them in any future listings we may prepare. Under separate correspondence we have advised Bob W. which items are so effected and at what quantity level. The enclosed fly-away kit listings therefore do not include any of these items.

The total estimated cost of these lists is $4,486.95; and the fixed fee on this amount at 8.25% is $370.11. The total estimated cost, including fee, is $4,857.06.
